

score. Therefore, be aware, alert and read and hear the text & clip thoroughly for these kind of things that generally goes unnoticed.

- Time management:

One of the most important things about any exam is the time management. Time can be a person's best friend and the worst enemy; depends on utilization of it. No matter how good your command is, over the language, or how much you know about the content; unless you are at par with the time, your efforts to score well will go in vain. Therefore, keep an eye on the clock with utmost importance. To enhance this, you can always practice your language, listening and reading enhancement in a certain time window and that will provide you with a lot of help.

- Narrow down your research work:

While attempting your answers, the options provided below will look very tempting but not all of them will be correct and accurate with the statement. This also becomes very confusing to pick. To sway away from this mess, start negating all the incorrect points. More you do that, more of correct options you will be left with and this is where your word power and vocabulary comes in handy. Check for the word that sounds or means the same as of that of the sentence. One more thing that can be an immense help is the words used in question as well as in the answers, which acts like the continuation of one single paragraph.

- Be confident and focused:

Focus and confidence are the key elements in here. You need to be very attentive and focused all throughout your exam time. Scoring high and low can happen to the best of the best.
